Street Dixon Rick Architecture selected for Woodbury Library Design

Nashville, TN - Street Dixon Rick Architecture was selected to design an addition and renovation for the Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Adams Memorial Library, Woodbury officials announced today.

The original library was constructed in 1964, after friends of the late Dr. Adams determined that a community library would be the best way to honor his service to the community. Adams, a banker and physician, brought many new jobs to Woodbury through his visionary efforts in economic development.

"Street Dixon Rick's team inspired us with their professionalism, creativity and ability to explain the entire process to our building committee," said Angela Ott, Building Committee member.

"We are confident that our new library will be a beautiful, functional building. The biggest surprise so far is how enjoyable the design process is," Ott said.

"We understand that libraries are important parts of the civic and cultural fabric in all communities, and we are pleased to have been chosen to lead the planning initiative at Woodbury," said Baird Dixon, AIA, LEED AP, firm principal for Street Dixon Rick Architecture, PLC.

Community leaders hope to complete an addition and renovation that will more than double their existing facility. This includes a new dedicated children's library, a new technology area, and expanded patron services.

Street Dixon Rick Architecture provides architecture, programming, master plans and interiors for universities and schools, churches, libraries, and commercial projects such as offices and health and wellness centers.

The firm has established a national reputation for its expertise in student housing and accommodations as well as for its leadership in sustainable designs. Early on in the worldwide conversation about sustainable design, the firm's architecture team achieved 100 percent LEED accreditation. The firm supports the U.S. Green Building Council Middle Tennessee chapter, the National Coalition of Girls School and the Southeastern Association of Housing Officers. Street Dixon Rick Architecture is also a proud sponsor of WPLN, the NPR station in Nashville.

Clients include Vanderbilt University, Juniata College in Pennsylvania, Middle Tennessee State University, St. Andrew Lutheran Church, The Harpeth Hall School, Harding Academy, Una Elementary School, and the W. F. Adams Memorial Library.
